Write a thank you note to someone. The note should be legible, written with proper grammar, spelling, and punctuation, and should be authentic. Write something that you would actually give to the person. You could write a friend, a family member, a teacher, or someone else in your life you want to thank. Be specific about what you are thanking the person for.

Hand write it on a piece of paper (binder paper or white printer paper).

Your note should be at least three sentences long and should start and end like a real letter or note.

When done, come show it to me. If it is to a teacher, I can put it into the teacher's mailbox if you want. Otherwise, I will let you get the note to the right person.
